New student government positions announced

by Dominic J. Dezzutti
Guest Reporter

The student government at Regis College passed a dramatically new organizational structure last Monday. The new organization directly effects the Student Executive offices.

Instead of eight available positions, there are now twelve. And, instead of eight elected positions, there are now three. The President, Vice President and Chief Justice remain elected positions on the Cabinet. The other nine positions are available through an application/interview process that is handled by the three elected officers.

The nine selected positions are the Directors of Operations, Finance, PAC, Community Service, College Events, Minority and Cultural Affairs, Nursing Affairs, Media Relations, and Public Relations.

The cabinet and expanded director roles were created in order to meet areas of the constituency that did not have a direct voice on the student government executive branch.

The Student Senate passed the amendment that put these changes into effect nearly unanimously. There was strong support for change in the Executive Board from the Senate and this year's Board.

Executive Board President, Dominic Dezzutti, commented that this plan will work only through the active involvement of the students.

The elections for the three officer positions are on February 23rd, 9am-3pm, in the Student Center lobby. All students are eligible to vote.

The three winners of these elections will select the cabinet of directors in the weeks following the election.

Only four of the nine cabinet positions resemble ones found on the current executive board. The other five directors are new.

The cabinet will retain the Director of Operations, Finance, Community Service and PAC.

New directors on the cabinet include:

*Director of Minority and Cultural Affairs, who will be in charge of the Martin Luther King celebration.

*Director of Nursing Affairs will be the direct liaison to the Nursing student constituency.

*Director of Media Relations, will help and guide the Communications Board.

*Director of Public Relations will be the promoter of the entire cabinet and the one voice to the outside community concerning Regis events.

*Director of College Events will organize the College Events Council and program the major events during the year.

Dezzutti emphasized at the Student Senate meeting that it is vital that students get involved for this new plan to work. But with student involvement, this cabinet will represent and reach more members of the Regis community.

The applications for each cabinet position will be available in the Campus Life office starting February 28th and will be due after Spring Break on March 14th.

The whole cabinet and student government will be inaugurated on March 25th. Everyone is invited to the Inaugural Ball that night.

Deborah Mathis of Gannett news was the keynote speaker at Regis' third annual Media Day, held in the ALC on February 9. She spoke to communication arts students after dinner, urging her listeners to follow the Golden Rule in whatever they pursue in life.

Third Annual Media Day features communication professionals

by Amy Everitt
Staff Reporter

What were Deborah Mathis of Gannett News, John Ferrugia of KMGH-TV, and the Denver Post's Editor Isabel Spencer all doing at Regis University on Wednesday, February 9? They were all a part of the third annual Media Day.

The day started off at 3:00 with workshops by Lynn Kimbrough of KOA radio and Curt Brogren of Brogren-Kelly Associated (an advertising firm). Lynn Kimbrough got everyone excited about the world of radio while Curt Brogren explained the world of graphic advertising.

At 4:00 John Ferrugia presented a workshop on Media Ethics. He provided students with a "what if" situation, making them the editors, with the power to decide what to print and what not to print. Sharon Levy also presented a workshop at this time on becoming involved in the world of media.

The 5:00 workshops included presentations by Isabel Spencer from the Denver Post, and Mason Lewis of KNUS.

The workshops were followed by a banquet with keynote speaker Deborah Mathis. Her speech was titled "Keep in Touch." She implored the students to stand up for what they believe and not to ever compromise their principles. She wished them all the best and hoped that they would continue the revolution she has been working towards her whole life.

"All the speakers were knowledgeable and communicated their experiences in the news business well," commented Andreatta Grisenti.

Media Day was a great success. The students learned about the world of media and everyone had a great time.

Dan Fortney, head disc jockey of KRCX, was the first to broadcast last Wednesday when the station went on the air. The station's new location is the Media Center in the basement of the Student Center.

The Regis Scene

John Ferrugia, news anchor and special projects reporter from KMGH-TV, presented an ethics workshop for Media Day. He involved the audience in a discussion about ethical concerns and decisions that confront reporters and editors.

Andreatta Grisenti/Highlander

Fr. Michael Sheeran attended the Media Open House last week and was present when KRCX went on the air. Here, he mingled with students who came to listen to Regis' radio station in its new location.

Andreatta Grisenti/Highlander

Isabel Spencer, managing editor of The Denver Post, spoke to students about what makes a story newsworthy and how editors decide which stories are placed on the front page of a newspaper.

Andreatta Grisenti/Highlander

Sharon Levy works in the community affairs department at KCNC-TV. She writes, shoots, edits and produces public service announcements and special projects for non-profit organizations. Her Media Day workshop was entitled "Making TV Work 4 You."

Heather Baniszewski/Highlander

Lynn Kimbrough, the field reporter for the morning news on KOA Radio, discussed ratings and how stations are operated and the importance of students doing internships to learn the business.

Andreatta Grisenti/Highlander

Dr. Kevin Maly, communication arts professor, and Mason Lewis, program director of KNUS, listened attentively to Deborah Mathis' keynote address at Media Day.

Regis Forensics - It's no longer about dead people

by Tammy Shultz
Guest Reporter

New coach. New tournament. New direction. New activities. New success. Other than these changes, nothing much is new on the Regis Forensics Team.

New coach: Mary Ryan has many years of experience as a speech and debate director across the Rocky Mountain Region. With more energy than should be allowed to exist in a person that stands a proud five feet tall, Mary has refocused a team in desperate need of a vision.

New tournament: For the first time in its history, the Regis Forensics team will host a speech and debate tournament. The Mile High Invitational will be held at Regis University February 18th and 19th, and will end at the Holiday Inn North (I-70 and Pecos) on February 20th. Approximately 200 students will be attending the tournament from over 25 schools, including universities from Alaska and New York. If you are interested in joining the forensics team, this tournament provides you with the perfect opportunity to see what the team does at a competition. If you would like more information about the Mile High Invitational, please either contact a member of the forensics team or call Mary Ryan at 458-3547.

Also, please mark March 18th on your calendars to see the Regis Forensics team square off against the Irish Debate Team National Champions for the second year in a row. More information will be forth coming.

New direction: With a new emphasis on the educational aspects of speech and debate, the Regis Forensics Team is looking for students who would like to join the team and learn to be more effective communicators and thinkers. Forget everything you may have heard about needing to have a scholarship to participate or about a requirement for speech experience in high school or college to be considered. All that is required is a commitment to learn. If you are interested in finding out more, contact Mary Ryan at the number given above.

New activities: The forensics team is more than applying communication training at speech tournaments-- the team is also becoming more active in the community. For instance, over Christmas break, several members of the team performed a Christmas play at three retirement centers in the area.

New success: Besides outstanding individual performances by senior Dom Dezzutti, juniors Vik Gumbhir and Tammy Schultz, sophomores Tamara Stanton Ed Horejs, and Anthony Bonino, and freshmen Marcus Paroske, Rachel Palmer, Sharon Stalp and Danica Favorite, the Regis Forensics Team has placed in the top five schools at all of the seven tournaments attended thus far this season. By making the basis of Regis Forensics educational, instead of competition for competition for competition's sake alone, team members have enjoyed competition while upholding Regis' tradition of excellence in speech and debate.

Regis History: Who Dun' It?

On the night of October 31, 1973, the language lounge then located in Carroll Hall was broken into and ransacked. The work was first believed to be of "trick-or-treating" students but no one claimed responsibility nor was anyone accused.

Halloween is notorious for the night the stranger events take place. This is the night for the lost souls. Everyone loves to dress up as their favorite ghoul and scare each other.

"All the fixtures in the room were removed and replaced with items which one would associate with a scholar or a scientist. Included in the new furnishings were a desk, books, and various scientific apparatus."

Many speculate the "Ghost of Carroll Hall" is the one at large. Father Armand Forstall, S.J. is suggested to be the entity within Carroll hall. Forstall, a noted scientist of Denver whose "scientific works were never found" after his death April 21, 1948. "Some say perhaps he cannot rest until they are found."

The November 16, 1973 issue of the Brown & Gold reported receiving the following letter.

Dear Editor,

A strange thing happened when I returned to my old third floor study in Carroll Hall on October 31, 1973. Someone had removed all my books, notes, and belongings. I know it's been many years since I've been back but, still, no one has the right to make a language lounge out of MY STUDY.

So, I took it upon myself to remove such useless and senseless items as chairs, a coffee table, two screens and a projector. I've written a personal letter of disgust to the President of the College. Who would never allow my scientific research to be ruined with meaningless aids to language study. I'd just like to say I'll be back-unannounced!

Truly yours,
Father Armand Forstall, S.J.

Who was the culprit? Was it really Father Armand or a bunch of malicious students?

Faith and Justice Institute addresses issues of violence

In response to the growing shadow of violence in our lives the Faith and Justice Institute has announced its plans for a campus-wide series of events concerning violence and youth. The week long event will take place during the week of February 21.

These events include a panel of those working "on the front lines" with young people, and presentations by Denver's District Attorney Bill Ritter and Senator Dennis Gallagher. A session on violence in relationships, a presentation by a national leader in work with gangs, and a candle-light prayer service with a visiting Jesuit father and justice fellow from Australia.

The institute is urging faculty to dedicate class time to the topic of violence, especially among the youth, in our society. Already scheduled by more than ten faculty members are discussions focussing on violence and women, economic causes of violence, and non-violent conflict resolution.

All Regis students, faculty, and staff are encouraged to attend the campus-wide events. It is the hope of the institute that the week will contribute to efforts dealing with the growing violence of our society.

Notes from the Barrio by Christopher Pramuk

Author's Note: This piece is dedicated with gratitude to the woman who was raped last month in Rocky Mountain Park, and who has since shared her story with the Regis community. Thank you.....

Why has God given us night? Night sneaks in upon us like a blanket not asked for, laying its shadows down over the unknowing child who dreams. The child's dreams are fitful dreams-- she is running from forces unseen and monstrous.

But truly the child's worst dreams, like our own, play out in the full light of day: at school, in the work place, even in the park which once seemed so innocent. The world itself pursues us without rest. We have no place to hide.

Gunshots on Lowell Boulevard. Anonymous graffiti on brick walls. And while the dream gets worse, I run faster and faster: looking out for number one, grasping for job security, chasing the American Dream.

Hollywood feeds a battered American consciousness which has drifted into survival mode; we no longer know the difference between entertainment and true celebration.

"In a movie theater, the person next to you does not count at all; empty seats do not bother anyone; and conversation is frowned upon."

DISTANCE: that's the key. Distance is the reliable keeper of peace between you and me. In this world, a nice automobile is the best place to be. Speeding along in my personal cockpit there is plenty of metal between me and my neighbor. (Unless, of course, there happens to be a riot. Then I may pull you out of your car--your apparent fortress--and force you to see just how real I am.)

Build the wall higher. Add a security fence. Give me an electronic I.D. card. Better yet, educate me. Then, at least, I can be sure to run faster than you and all the starving masses who threaten to swallow up my piece of the Dream.

Why has God given me the night for which I did not ask? Perhaps to wash the bad dream away in un-numbered pints of beer; to cloak the hurried day and all of its monsters in forgetfulness. Is this why? (Why ask why: drink Bud Dry.)

"We are too rigid in our demands and our work to appreciate why God has given us the night. We need the calm hopefulness of a few quiet hours. God does not want human beings who do not sleep, who burn with fever and impatience in their beds."

The night seems to mock all our frenzied attempts to make the world spin around. Dusk closes in, saying with her shadows, "No more, people, that is enough for one day. Try and be still."

Why does God give us the night?

I only know this: tonight, this night, the darkness comforts me. Tonight I need this silence and the random flicker of these candles. Shadows play on the wall and suddenly I can hear my own breathing. As if for the first time, I can FEEL the steady rise and fall of my chest. Time, and all the world with it, is still. Tonight, my racing mind disappears into the slow rhythm of something greater, which has no name but peace.

Indeed, all the world groans this night for the calm hopefulness of a few quiet hours. And in that calm, all our frenzied questions and fears will fade beneath a hidden answer, which lays itself down over us like a blanket not asked for:

Be still and know that I am God, and that I love you.

Father Sheeran responds to safety issues at Regis

Dear Editor,

Your January 27 issue reports the rape of a Regis student in nearby Rocky Mountain Park. A separate article recalls a shooting by intruders in DeSmet twelve years earlier. Your articles lead me to a few reflections.

I was at Regis at the time of the 1982 shooting. It has something in common with last week's rape. Precisely because we live in a relatively safe neighborhood, there is a tendency to take chances, to presume "it could never happen here." If Regis were in a high crime district, we would be more inclined to follow reasonable advice by always running or walking with somebody else, keeping Hall doors locked, etc.

But the relative safety of the area tempts us to take a chance, to prop open a door, to make it easy for the perpetrator.

Just watch. Two or three weeks from now, a growing number of folks will start letting their guard down. This is the moment for all of us to make a serious commitment to safety. It's as simple as the self-discipline of running and walking with friends. It's as basic as removing the wedges when they reappear in Residence Hall doors.

Sincerely,
Michael Sheeran, S.J.
President

P.S. In the 1982 case, the intruders were originally thought to be Hispanic -- as your article reported. When arrested, they turned out to be Anglo. Stereotypes distort reality.

Risking it all: Is it worth it?

by Mario Eason
Staff Reporter and Columnist

As a child growing up, I can remember my mother consistently telling me I had a hard head. She repeatedly told me I was stubborn. She was right. I never wanted to listen, I had to do things my way or no way. I suffered many cuts and bruises due to it. I could never listen, I only heard, to the voice of experience. I was young and pig-headed.

Much of our society today could relate to this experience. However, many fail to understand even though it is the mature thing to do. Listen to your mother and father, your grandparents, and teachers. Do it for no one but yourself. With all of the free general information about Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), the millions of dollars put into advertising and education, people are still dying of AIDS and AIDS-Related Complex (ARC). Wear a condom! If you can not do it right than do not do it at all. Disbelievers beware! Condoms are the most effective defense against HIV infection next to abstinence. Abstinence is probably the most uncouth thing to do according to some. However, it is the only protection that is 100% effective. Sex has even become a right of passage in our society. One should not use sex to try to become an adult. How many times you have sex is not what makes you an adult. What responsibility you take shows your maturity more than your ignorance. Regardless, would you rather face a terminal fate or a promising future.

Numerous studies by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), and the National Institutes of Health (NIH) have proven the effectiveness of condoms. The Department of Health and Human Services released a Public Health Service Packet with information in defense of condoms. Included were results of studies done. "In a European study of 123 couples, in which one of the partners was HIV-infected, none of the uninfected partners contracted HIV over a two year period. In an Italian study of 171 couples, two percent of the uninfected partners contracted HIV over a two year period. Clearly, in order to prevent transmission of HIV, latex condoms must be used for each act of intercourse," said CDC coauthor Burt Peterson, M.D. When condoms are used inconsistently, ten percent of the partners became infected in the European study and fifteen percent became infected in the Italian report."

When used properly and consistently, condoms are your best defense against HIV and other sexually transmitted diseases (STD).

This is not an issue for just men but men and women. What was once considered the "gay plague" or an unknown form of cancer has proven no bias. It has become notorious for its desire to suck the life right from anyone. Black, white, gay, straight, male, female, no one is exempt. Abstinence is praise worthy and irresponsible promiscuity is condemnable.

What does all this mean? Having sex is bad? No. It means you are an adult now and it is time you took responsibility for yourself. There is no excuse for ignorance at this time. Stupidity would be the default. Women are not exempt from responsibility. Female condoms will soon be available not to mention a woman's ability to say No! Take responsibility for yourself.

Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, more commonly known as AIDS, is not what you can catch. What you can catch is HIV virus. This can lead to AIDS or other AIDS related diseases. There is no cure for AIDS. It is undoubtedly a terminal disease. However, there is a way to prevent it; correct and consistent condom use.

For more information about HIV/AIDS contact the CDC National Hotline at 1-800-342-AIDS. Regis' own health center offers confidential pre and post counseling; also offered is confidential testing. The initial blood draw is $48.00. Should the lab have any questions about a positive result there is an additional fee of $97.00. If these are two expensive the health center could refer you to other clinics. If you have any further questions about HIV testing or referral call 458-3558. Is it really worth it?

From the Office of the President by Dominic J. Dezzutti

Today marks an end and a beginning. Today is my final article as the official President of the Student Executive Board. However, this time next week, we will all know the identity of the first President of the Regis University Student Body.

Let me explain. February 23rd is election day. Because our new government plan and structure is now officially part of our constitution, the Executive Board, as we know it, is extinct. That is not to say that the current members of the board are going to stop working. Our jobs are not done until each member of the new cabinet is fully trained and ready to serve this constituency.

The Executive Board is extinct because it was obsolete. The members of the current board, our advisor and I examined the government structure last December and realized that it was not reaching many people. The current board consists of only eight people. However, there is no established link to the board in several student areas. We hoped to make ourselves more efficient and more ready to serve Regis by creating this new structure.

The new structure looks like this. We made three elected positions: President, Vice-President and Chief Justice. These elected positions will be filled by seniors who will help select a nine-member cabinet.

The nine members of the cabinet resemble the old board in only four areas. The other five directors are new. We retain the Directors of Operations, Finance, Community Service and PAC.

The new directors are:

*Director of Minority and Cultural Affairs

*Director of Nursing Affairs

*Director of Media Relations

*Director of Public Relations

*Director of College Events

These new directors reach the populations who did not before have a direct voice. For example, it is about time a representative from the nursing constituency have a direct voice to the student executive branch. And, it makes complete sense to have a minority and cultural affairs director leading this school into a world of diversity and change.

When challenged to make a substantive difference, this is what we came up with. However, like the Buffalo Bills' Super Bowl Game plans, these ideas are nothing without the right people.

You, the Regis student, are responsible for the success of this group. All of us have the responsibility to help our community. If you cannot apply for one of these positions, then encourage someone who can. The Executive Board can only be the coach; you, the students, are the players. We can draw up the plan for success, but the students of this university have the responsibility to execute it.

Under the spotlight: Dyslexic Apaches

No, I'm Not Really Hungry

by Barb Shockley
Entertainment Editor

For just a local Illinois band, Dyslexic Apaches are far beyond the local talent. Combining sounds that include stuff from Pearl Jam, Soundgarden, The Ramones, Red Hot Chili Peppers, Alice In Chains, Nine Inch Nails and even in some places Iron Maiden, this alternative band is making waves all over the northern U.S. area.

This five piece of early 20 year-olds have been around since 1990 and have released a full length album last year called No, I'm Not Really Hungry.

The vocals from Bruce Lamont are almost the exact replica of Eddie Vedder and Chris Cornell, but has some Layne Staley mystery to them (Lamont may sound like Vedder and Cornell, but that doesn't mean the band sounds like they walked off the block with all the other Seattle wannabe bands. They don't have the grunge sound to them at all!).

The guitar work from Al Rodis and Mike Greaney bring forth the groove and the dance, with the funk from Joey Moccasin on bass, and adding in the backbone drummer Dan Lutger, this band is tight, structured, and is very well molded.

Dyslexic Apaches are number four on Illinois CMJ list, a big accomplishment for a local band.

Special to Highlander.

From tracks like "Slap Happy Crack Addict (From Madison, WI)" which carries a very psychotic atmosphere, "Lawn Guy" very Ramone-ish on the music, "Short A Load" with groove, "I Suppose" which has the Flea of the Red Hot Chili Peppers' bass, they all have one thing in common: they are all very intriguing! All eight songs on the album make the listener keep the CD player rollin' non-stop throughout the 50 minutes of continuous music.

These young men are very talented and will probably be the next band with a big name. Dyslexic Apaches may not be from a huge town, but they will probably make a name for themselves in time. They're already number four on the CMJ in Illinois, so why don't you all give them a listen. A CD costs $10 (postage and handling included), and you can get it by writing to: Dyslexic Apaches, P.O. Box 644, Tinely Park, IL 60477.

KRCX hits the air waves!

By Amy Everitt
Staff Reporter

"5...4...3...2... and we're on the air, live!" Yes, on Monday February 7, 1994 KRCX, Rockin' Regis Radio, went on the air. From the AM 590 dial, music transmitted onto the Regis campus.

D.J. Dan Fortney started the whole thing off with an interview with Regis University President, Father Sheeran. After the interview, music of every style poured out of the station.

The rest of the evening was filled with contests, prize give-aways and some great fun.

Unfortunately, O'Connell Hall was not able to join in the party, because they don't have a transmitter yet.

"We're working on the problem," says music director Shawn Wehan. "When O'Connell was remodeled, the transmitter was broken. We've ordered a new one, but until then, all we can do is wait."

KRCX has been a huge project for this year, but everyone is glad to see the radio station finally off the ground. The staff has been working very hard to try and get it operational as quickly as possible. "We still have some rough stuff to work out, but within a month, KRCX is going to be one of the coolest things on campus. It'll be just like a real radio station," states Shawn.

You, too can be part of the fun. If you're interested in joining the KRCX team, just contact Shawn at 458-4140, or Tammy at 458-4327. Even if you don't want to be a D.J. you can still tune in at 590 on the AM dial and hear the coolest music and get the latest on campus happenings. I hope you're listening.

Pearl Jam to renew cancelled show

Seattle's Pearl Jam makes their rounds to Colorado again playing the Paramount on March 6 and 7. This show is being held for those of you who hold tickets from the November show that was cancelled at CU. There are no new tickets on sale at press time, but there might be some added. Tickets that are from November can be refunded or traded for new seats by calling TicketMaster.

Janet Jackson's new date

Those of you who have Janet Jackson tickets, please be aware that the date has changed from February 21 to March 1. The show is still going to be held at McNichols.

Local band Intense get on compilation

Denver local Intense gets a great break. They were put onto a compilation album with bands like Kiss, Lillian Axe, Scorpions, etc. with their song "Grind." This marks the first time any unsigned band has been put onto the compilation. The Concrete Marketing Forum Compilation album is out now in stores and local stations KAZY and KIL0 are playing the song over the airwaves.

This time instead of going for those over-exposed, dorky, untalented, signed bands, I think I will try to focus my attention on the homefront! (Yipee!)

Yes, I will give you the scoop on all the local band gossip, what to see, what not to see, and give you people some suggestions to get your butt out there and see some talent! (Support your local musicians, man!)

We can start with alternative, since most of you out there are alternative freakazoids! Well, I know of three or four bands that I can personally recommend (you know me, Ms. Metal Goddess!).

I do know that Electric Swingset is a happening band. They play Herman's Hideaway a lot. The Reejers are pretty hip too. The play around a lot, check the Westword. But my personal favorite alternative local band is Life Explodes. They play Franklin's and Herman's, but they won't be back until March 11 & 12. (Hey John, Hubbabubba!!!)

As for any of the other alternative locals, I don't have any idea because I'm never at any of their shows!

BUT...here's my list of hot local metal bands! My absolute favorite local band is The Dark. They fuse everything into one type of music. Followed by my other favorites Leviathan, Intense, Death & Taxes, Chatterbox, Uncle Rip, Vandal, and Angelic Rage.

There are a bunch of other cool bands too. Hippie Werewolves, Schizondra, Day In Age, Assasin, Third Mist, and Ashley X.

These are a few of the many talented bands out there, and I could tell you a few to stay away from, but I'd probably get in trouble if I did, because a few of these dudes are my pals...

But do yourself a favor, and do these hard working musicians a favor, go a check them out. Even if you might not like the music, go check them out. For $2 to $5 bucks you can see the most exciting show of your life! And just you wait, with a scene like Denver's, we could be the next Seattle and then you can say that you saw these dudes before they got big!!! (Wow, what a thrill, huh!)

Trust me, the worst thing that could happen is that you might actually like one of these bands and then have to see them everytime they play! Really, for cheap entertainment, it is really great to get out!

Cross Purposes - Black Sabbath Returns

by Barb Shockley
Entertainment Editor

The heavy metal band that has been around longer than I have been alive has returned to the scene with yet another album. Of course I'm talking about Black Sabbath.

Sabbath's return to the scene marks their 25th year of being together. After countless albums and tours, Cross Purposes (IRS 1994) is by far the most modern Sabbath album to date. Their music is very updated and refreshing.

Although Ozzy Osborne and Ronnie James Dio are not singing on this album, Tony Martin makes wonderful vocalist for the band. Not only does he sound good with the band, but his voice is very stunning. It's really hard not to say that he does sound like Dio in some instances. As a matter of fact, their first single "Back To Eden" (which is currently being played nationwide) is hard to get yourself to believe that it's not Dio who is singing.

As for the rest of the band, two original members reappear. Toni Iommi (guitar) and Geezer Butler (bass) have been with the band since 1969. Adding to the new Sabbath are Bobby Rondinelli (drums) and Geoff Nicholls (keyboards).

The new dimension that Sabbath has taken sounds so much more intimate and together. It isn't lacking something, like in previous Sabbath albums. As a matter of fact, this album (produced by Leif Mases) is really soothing to the ear. There is no heavy metal "screaming" or "screaching," just a band that has grown into believing in melody.

Special to Highlander.

The mixes in the album are no longer raw and rough, they are more complete and thorough. Mases (who's also produced Lillian Axe) does an excellent job at constructing the album into a masterpiece.

This ten song album will be bringing Sabbath out on tour with Motorhead and Morbid Angel. As a matter of fact, Sabbath will be coming to the Denver area at the Paramount Theatre on March 1. Tickets are around $15.00 and are on sale through Ticket Master 290-TIXS.

Dancing In The Dark

by Amy Random
Entertainment Reporter

Devil's Waltz, by prolific writer Jonathan Kellerman, is a book of dark intrigue, suspected child abuse and murder. After Kellerman's career in child psychology he became a writer and created the character Alex Delaware who is a psychologist/ detective.

In this novel, Alex is called by an old friend to consult on a case. The case involves Cassie Jones, a twenty-one month old child who has been in and out of the hospital since birth. She comes down with symptoms ranging from intestinal problems to seizures.

Cassie's doctor can find no physical reason for her illnesses, and suspects a rare form of mental disease called 'munchausen by proxy.' In this disease, a person makes another physically sick in order to get attention or to feel needed.

As the novel progresses the reader is left guessing as people are murdered, evidence disappears, and alibis turn out to be lies. Other characters, such as Milo Sturgis and Alex's girlfriend Robin, make appearances and help Alex solve the mystery. The ending is a surprise, as usual with Kellerman's books, and the suspense keeps you turning the pages until the very end.

Dark Dance by Tanith Lee is the first horror novel by this Science Fiction writer. This novel is about Rachaela

Day and her mysterious family.

An only child raised by a spiteful mother, Rachaela lives her life as a loner. One day she hears word from a family named Scarabee who claim to be her family.

After much thought, Rachaela leaves her life in London and travels to join the Scarabee at their ancestral home. Once there, she discovers a family steeped in darkness and deceit with a history of madness.

She meets a mysterious lover who claims to be her father, even though he appears to be her own age. She conceives a child and decides to leave the house that now feels like a prison. Years later, the family seduces her child, Ruth, away from her and Rachaela must fight to get her away from the evil Scarabee.

Although some of the language in this novel makes it difficult to read at times, the story is good, the characters are interesting, and the mystery is fun to unravel. Is the family a coven of vampires? Or are they just strange people? Read the book and find out!

Regis Lacrosse Is Getting Started

by E.J. Feulner
Sports Writer

As the second Regis Lacrosse team continues on its crash course with Colorado School of Mines, set for February 27, the Rangers continue to become accustomed with the new program, its coaches and the players themselves.

During the off season, the Athletic Department hired a new head coach to take over the reigns of the struggling program.

Coach Romansky inherited a fledgling program with little money and few players.

In the short amount of time that he has been working with the team, it has shown tremendous improvement.

Hiring Coach Tatton to work with the defense was the first move Romansky made, and the defense is already proving to be the strongest part of the team. As coach Romansky says: "It all starts with defense."

Sean "Triplecast" Breen, Seamus "The Animal" Daley and E.J. Feulner return to the team as captains. It is evident that they will be able to showcase their talents under this new program. They are looked upon as leaders by both the coaches and the players and we all can expect great things from them in the near future.

There is also excitement in the air of the locker room concerning the play of a few rookies joining the team as Freshman this year.

These players will be looked upon to contribute heavily to the outcome of each and every game. If they can step up their game and play successfully in the difficult NCAA arena, then Regis Should have a successful season.

Enduring as much as five hour workouts on Saturday mornings, and regular three hour practices on weekdays, coach Romansky promises to have the team in shape and ready to beat up on Mines by February 27.

If the team continues to work hard and improve, this should not be a problem.

The Rangers should walk away from the crash clutching a victory; and what a moral and physical victory it would be.

Remember to get out and cheer on your only contact sport here at Regis on the 27th of February.

UNCOVERING THE MYTH AND FACTS OF MARIJUANA USE

By: Debbie Hall

Did you know that nearly 25% of all Americans have experimented with marijuana, and an estimated 20 million people in the United States smoke it on a daily basis? The myth about marijuana is that it is a harmless substance that helps people to relax. Yet, the fact remains that marijuana is a mood-altering drug which can cause severe physical and emotional damage. The physical effects associated with marijuana use are somewhat apparent. It creates a mild euphoria and alters your perception. Extreme use of the drug can increase health risks and impair the immune system. It also causes dependency and feelings associated with addiction.

Note: Here are some warning signs:

- Impaired memory
- Difficulty learning and remembering tasks
- Persistent lack of energy
- Apparent lack of ambition
- Frequent absences from work or school
- Impaired coordination
- Mental confusion
- Lack of judgment
- Slowed reaction
- Problems concentrating

Men's Basketball Capture CAC Lead

By: B.J. Frohnepfel
Sports Writer

Although the Rangers have been plagued by injuries, the team has pulled together and kept the Rangers atop in the Colorado Athletic Conference. After 22 games the Rangers are 17-5 overall and 7-1 in conference play.

There are four games left, including the Rangers last home game against Metro State University.

The Rangers will travel to Fort Lewis, Colorado Christian, and Denver University.

With injuries to Carlos Boyd and JoJo Harris, Players have had to come off the bench and contribute greatly.

Players like Keith Brooks who has stepped into the starting line up and Nigue Stewart who comes off the bench as a shot blocking threat.

Senior, pre-season All-American Pat Holloway said, "We get a big lift from Ricky Munoz scoring and now that JoJo (Harris) is back, he will help out a lot defensively. Our hard working defense has got us through the season".

Pat Holloway then continues, "Our motto is to play hard and focus on defense. This has been a complete team effort with everyone coming off the bench to contribute".

The Rangers took sole possession of first place in the CAC by embarrassing the University of Colorado-Colorado Springs 90-59, last Saturday night here at Regis.

Kris Hicks scored 20 points, Ricky Munoz had 13 and Micky Ryan had 8 points.

Ricky Munoz Is One Of A Kind

By Kevin Catron
Sports Editor

For Ricky Munoz during the early months of this school year being a basketball player was nothing new to him, being a minority was. Ricky Munoz is the first Hispanic male basketball player here at Regis University.

Until Ricky came to Regis, being Hispanic simply meant being himself. Now being Hispanic meant a whole new role. Ricky had the weight of a whole community on his shoulders. If Ricky scores 24 points with 5 three pointers, the verdict may be, "Man, those Hispanics sure can play basketball". Yet if Ricky portrays himself in an "unproper" manner, then the verdict may be somewhat less desirable.

Ricky Munoz now portrays a community both rich in culture and tradition, on and off the basketball court.

This new role that Ricky has had issued to him is not as difficult and as challenging as he first imagined, as you will soon see. In this interview, Ricky discusses how he feels being the first Hispanic basketball player here at Regis.

So Ricky, tell us were you are from.

"I am originally from Los Angeles, but when I was fourteen I moved to Douglas, Arizona to be closer to the Mexican border, also to be closer to my mother's relatives. I have lived there ever since".

Why did you come to Regis?

"The main reason that I chose Regis is because of Lonnie Porter (head coach). When I first met Porter, I respected him as person and as a coach. When you are being recruited, most coaches will tell you what you want to hear, coach Porter told me how it is. Coach Porter puts a strong emphasis on academics. We have mandatory study table and we must carry a minimum of 18 credit hours. Coach Porter stressed life after basketball. That is what I needed to hear".

How do you feel becoming the first Hispanic Basketball player here at Regis University?

"I feel that this is an opportunity to pave the way for other hispanic basketball players. I don't know why I am the first. I don't think coach Porter did it on purpose. Coach Porter looks for a certain type of player, and I happened to fit that description".

How has your adjustment been since you first arrived?

Initially I found the adjustment to be very hard. Where I come from there is not much diversity, there are primarily Hispanics. Here there seems to be every type of race! It was hard to adjust to the social aspect of life here. The fashions, the language and even the personality's were very different than what I had been used to.

Sometimes when I would walk through the quad, I would feel self-conscious as if people were looking at me.

But as the days went on, I learned that that was not true.

Both faculty and students help me very much in my adjustment here at Regis. I do need to remember though, that I do represent the Hispanic community as a whole and whatever I do, both on and off the court, people will judge me as an Hispanic".

What is your role on the team at this point?

"Basically to come off the bench and to provide a spark for our team. Whether it be defensively, passing the ball or even scoring myself".

Have you ever had any troubles since you have been here at Regis?

"That's a funny question. When I first arrived here my mother and my friends both had written me letters. When, after a few weeks I still did not receive them I went down to the Regis mail room. I told them that my name is Enrique Munoz. They thought that I was an ELS student! Well, I eventually got my mail".

Whether he is scoring 24 points on the court or being a great guy off the court, Ricky Munoz has set the example for all Hispanic basketball players to follow. Hopefully, like Ricky, there will be many Hispanics to try to fill his shoes here at Regis University.
